MIND, HEART, AND HANDS

When our country was formed, our founding fathers were rebels with a cause. They were intelligent, dedicated to an idea, workaholics—strong-minded, ordinary men. They were from different backgrounds. They had egos, and some had a real dislike for each other. But they had a common cause: freedom. How many men would sacrifice their fortunes, families and homes for a principle today?

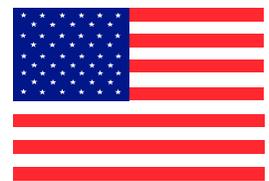

As Thomas Paine once said, "Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigues of supporting it" We need to re-energize ourselves and carry the torch for those whose voices are silent, those in the VA hospitals, those who are homeless, and for the security of our nations We must sustain our mission as advocates for veterans.

We have survived as a nation because the mind conceived an idea, the heart believed it and the hands achieved it. By the grace of God and the will and endurance of many dutiful men and women since the Revolutionary War, American has endured.

Certain groups in this country want to protect noncitizens and use the Constitution to benefit al-Qaida and the Taliban. They haven o concern for those who died in the terrorist attacks or those fighting the war, or those in VA hospitals, or those who cannot get into VA hospitals. They want God out of our life; they want God out of our Pledge of Allegiance. (pg. 2)

THOUGHTS

- Faith is the conviction that God knows more than we do about this life and he will get us through it.
- There are certain mountains only God can climb...It's not that you aren't welcome to try, it's just that you aren't able.

Max Lucado

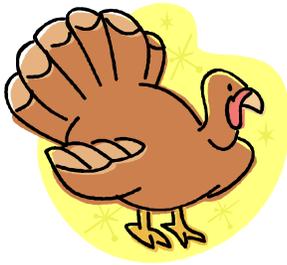

Con't from Pg. 1—Mind, Heart, and Hands

They believe it's OK to desecrate Old Glory.

Our country was founded on the principal of fighting tyranny. Our founding fathers gave up tangible assets to fight for an intangible belief: the right to be free. We will not and cannot forget our fellow veterans and those who gave their very lives for the free nation we are today. (American Legion Magazine)

THE CHURCH MOUSE

By Maudie

Well, hello again, and how was your month? Mine? Very busy; very, very busy!!! There never seems to be a dull moment. I don't know where the time goes. I think maybe it's because I'm getting "older" and can't accomplish as much in a day. At least, not like I did when I was 40. Forty, now that was a while ago.

I was thinking about last month's column and remembered another old say that my mom had: "Be sure when you go out there are no holes in your socks and that your underwear is clean. You never know when you might have to go to the hospital or be in an accident." Hmm, I wonder when I hit that deer with my car if he cared if my underwear was clean, or if my socks were holeless. And, when the police arrived, they didn't ask either. Or, when I suddenly decided to take a "flying leap" across the parking lot. I don't seem to remember the paramedic asking anything about my socks or underwear.

So I've been thinking about that saying; what did Mom actually mean? Did she think I would wear "holely" socks or whatever? Who knows? It's like catching that "under cold." Great old sayings from loved ones.

But, now when I think of it, I've repeated the same things to my kids. In fact, one of my kids replied, " Mom, don't worry , if a bear chases me, my underwear will be dirty!" So much for old sayings.

Have a blessed Thanksgiving, everyone. See you next month.

TURKEY FACTS

~Turkey is the only native poultry breed of the Western Hemisphere.

~Turkeys have great hearing skills but no ears.

~People do name turkeys according to their age—Turkeys less than sixteen weeks are called "fryers" while those between five to seven months of age are called "young roosters."

~Turkeys can see in colors, have excellent visual acuity and their field of vision spans across about 270 degrees.

~Turkeys are so sensitive that they can drown by looking up while it is raining and can have heart attacks due to sudden shock.

Now, don't you all feel smarter!
